Monthly Report

The Corvallis FFA has new chapter officers!

On April 13th, a selection committee consisting of local community leaders, as well as present and past FFA advisors, selected the future leaders of the chapter. Interestingly, many have already been engaged in helping the Corvallis FFA succeed. Kaylie Wilson, the new chapter president, already served as treasurer during the 2016 school year. Allie Auch, the chapter's 1st vice president, served as co-secretary. Michael McKay served as reporter, and Matt Wolsky and Emily Seifert led committees throughout the year.

April was also the month of the Montana Envirothon, an event held in Livingston, Montana as a cooperation between the FFA and the Montana DNRC. Designed to promote education on five different natural resource areas, the winners of the Envirothon competition advance to the national level in October.

April was a month of change for the Corvallis FFA, but optimism for the future of the chapter has never been higher.
